THE STORY

June 1944

At Allied operational headquarters in Britain, several senior commanders joined the leaders of Britain and the United States. They agreed that a foothold must be established without delay to liberate Europe after five years of war and turmoil. A large-scale landing in north-western France was set in motion.

Codenamed Operation Overlord (later known as the Normandy landings), it was an unprecedented undertaking: an immense force of 5,000 ships, 180,000 men and more than 10,000 supporting aircraft.

Before the operation began, the Allies carefully planned and skilfully carried out a series of diversions to conceal the landing site. No one doubted that their painstakingly prepared invasion would succeed.

British intelligence, however, reported a fortress called “Wielenz-Léorgue Chevalier” and the giant railway gun “DO - LA”, whose range covered the entire French coast. Their existence threatened to render every deception pointless. British commanders objected to proceeding: without eliminating the gun, there could be no landing.

Determined to launch the invasion, US headquarters concluded that this opportunity could not be missed. Operation Excalibur was hastily approved, with the principal objectives of assaulting the fortress and destroying DO - LA. The elite US Army special forces unit GUNTU ("General's Undercover Tactics Unit") was chosen to carry it out. And so...

“Hey! Boy!” You had drifted into a brief sleep, lulled by the gentle vibration of the twin-engined transport. The pilot’s call, almost a shout, woke you. For a British serviceman, he was remarkably cheerful and something of a joker.

“Ha ha! Bad luck, boy! Having to work at a time like this!” At the pilot’s joke, you looked out through the cockpit window. Thick cloud spread beneath the transport, as though barring your way. The engine noise gradually faded, giving way to the wind. You flung the door open, checked the ridgeline of the Pyrenees and hurriedly prepared to jump.

“Ready, boy? Our tomorrow depends on you!” You murmured “OK”, turned to give the pilot a brief salute, then leapt from the transport, wrapped in the light of dawn as though under divine protection.

USING SECONDARY AMMUNITION

CUSTOM

Piercing rounds pass through people, vehicles and other objects. They can be fired continuously. No sight is displayed.

COMBINATION

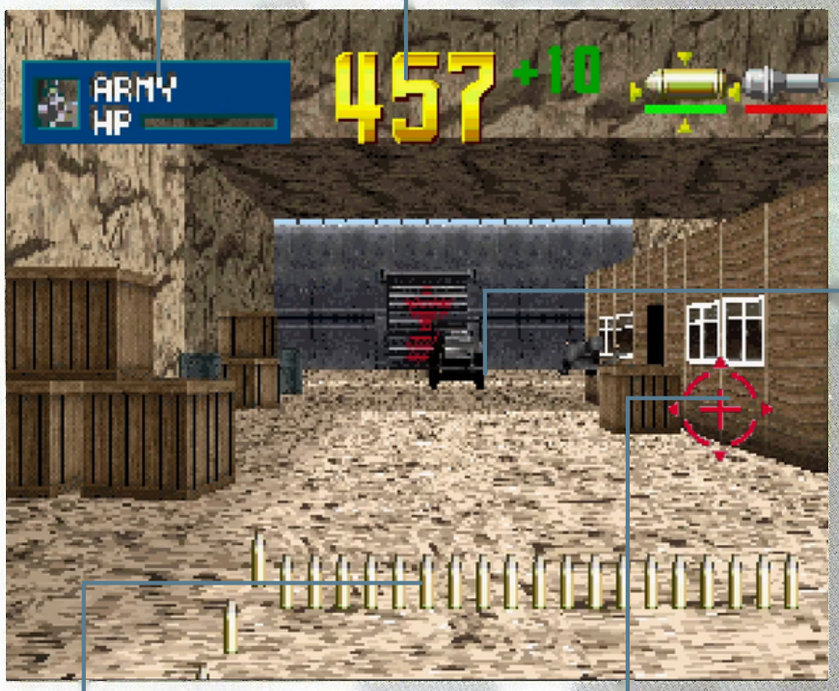

Explosive rounds damage the target and nearby enemies.

SPECIAL

Damages all enemies on screen equally.

ENEMY HP
Shows the health or armour durability of the enemy your bullets are hitting.

TIME REMAINING
The game ends at zero. Defeating certain enemies adds time; taking damage subtracts it.

AMMUNITION TYPE
Primary is on the left, secondary on the right. The yellow frame marks the selected type.

ENEMIES
Some charge into you. A collision can remove a large amount of time - beware!

AMMUNITION LEFT
Shows the rounds remaining for the selected type. At zero, you cannot fire for a few seconds.

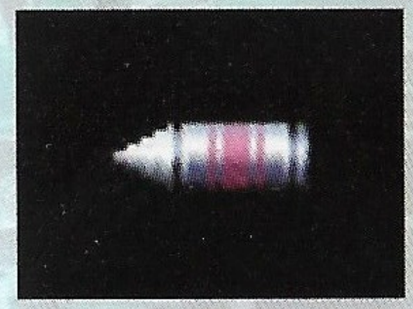

SIGHT
Shows where your shots will land. The gun sight is not displayed when using a GunCon.

MACHINE GUN

Your only weapon. It can fire normal or secondary ammunition.

NORMAL AMMUNITION - Rapid-firing but relatively weak; it cannot damage heavily armoured tanks. Begin with 25 rounds. Releasing the trigger replenishes normal ammunition up to 25.

SECONDARY AMMUNITION - Three types, each with a different effect.

CUSTOM

Piercing rounds pass through people, vehicles and other objects. They are not especially powerful, but can be fired continuously. Begin with 25 rounds; one is replenished every 2 seconds, up to 25.

COMBINATION

The explosion damages the target and nearby enemies. The most powerful secondary ammunition, especially effective against heavily armoured tanks. Begin with 5 rounds; one is replenished every 10 seconds, up to 20.

SPECIAL

Damages all enemies on screen equally and blasts most soldiers high into the air. Less powerful than COMBINATION. Begin with 3 rounds; one is replenished every 6 seconds, up to 10.

The enemy attacks in many ways. Learn their capabilities and defeat them efficiently.

Time gained: 25-75 seconds.

FINAL TARGET: THE GIANT RAILWAY GUN

The German Army's largest and most powerful land weapon. Built without regard for railway loading limits, it is 42.98 m long, 11.6 m high, 7.01 m wide and weighs 1,350 tonnes. Its size and weight require double track and a dedicated engineering unit. It carries one 240 cm gun and six 120 cm guns, fires up to three rounds per minute, and has a maximum range over 50 km: a true monster of the land.

Six stages await you, filled with tanks, artillery and other weapons operated by German commanders. Good luck!

STAGE 1

Rugged mountain roads lead towards the Pyrenees. Soon after taking control of this region, German forces began building a forward base, apparently as a foothold for further westward expansion.

STAGE 1

STAGE 2

Marquis Jean-Pierre Lièse once ruled this formidable fortress city. Its distinctive red-brick walls form a circle around the city and seem to reach the heavens. Their height and shape earned them the name "Lièse's Crown".

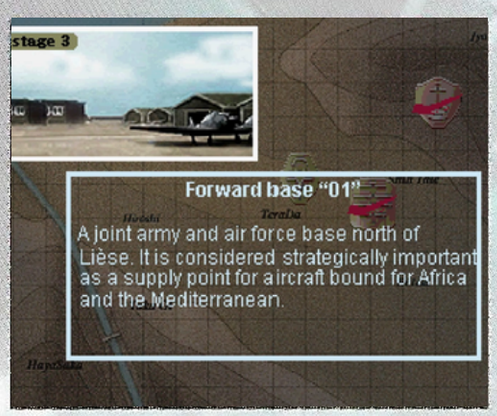

STAGE 2

STAGE 3

An army and air force supply base lies more than a hundred kilometres north of Lièse's Crown. Although unconfirmed, it is believed to be an important supply point for aircraft bound for Africa and the Mediterranean.

STAGE 4

A lush meadow surrounded by low hills. Known to the people of Lièse as "The Hill Where the Lord Is Seen", it was a place of faith with an 800-year-old temple. Two German bombing raids devastated the site.

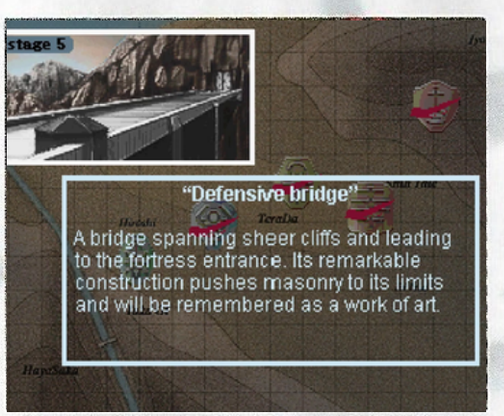

STAGE 4

STAGE 5

This bridge over sheer cliffs is the only approach to the fortress. Its intricate stonework, said to push masonry to its limits, displays an artistry remarkable for a structure designed during wartime.

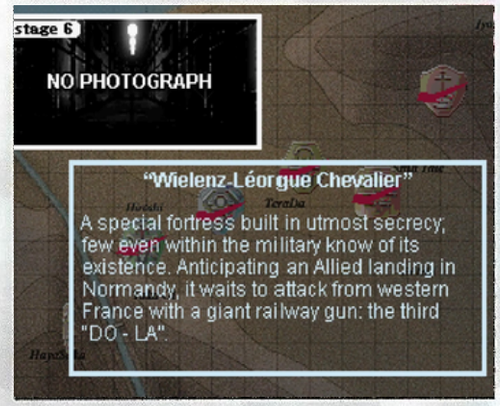

STAGE 5

STAGE 6

Few even within the German Army know of this fortress, built in utmost secrecy. Anticipating an Anglo-American landing in Normandy, it has already received the giant railway gun and is preparing to intercept the invasion.

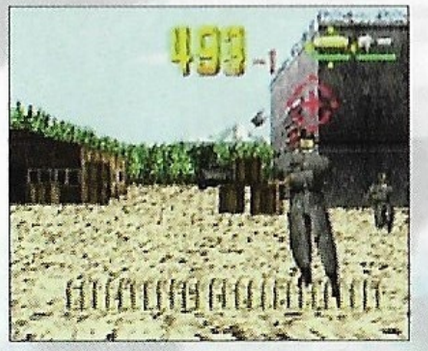

STAGE 6

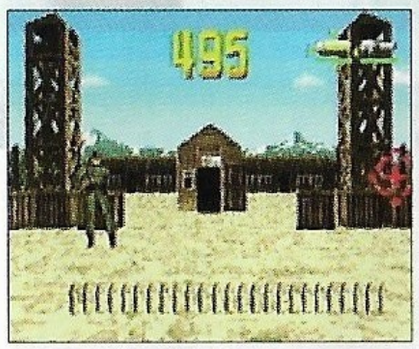

TIP

At stage selection, press START (B on the GunCon) to return to the title screen.

ADVICE

1. SHOOT DOWN GRENADES!

You can shoot down grenades thrown by soldiers and shells fired by armoured vehicles. Aim carefully. If they hit you, you may lose 5-100 seconds!

2. USE L1 AND R1 EFFECTIVELY

On a standard controller, L1 and R1 instantly move your sight to the screen edges. This lets you respond faster than with the directional buttons.

3. SAVE YOUR SECONDARY ROUNDS

Secondary ammunition replenishes every few seconds, depending on its type. Save it for the commander's vehicle or other boss to make later battles easier.

NAME ENTRY

A high score lets you record your name and ranking. Select and confirm END to finish.

Select: left/right directional buttons. With GunCon, shoot the left/right edges to move one character at a time, or shoot a visible character at an edge to select it.

Confirm: ○ BUTTON, or shoot the centre character.

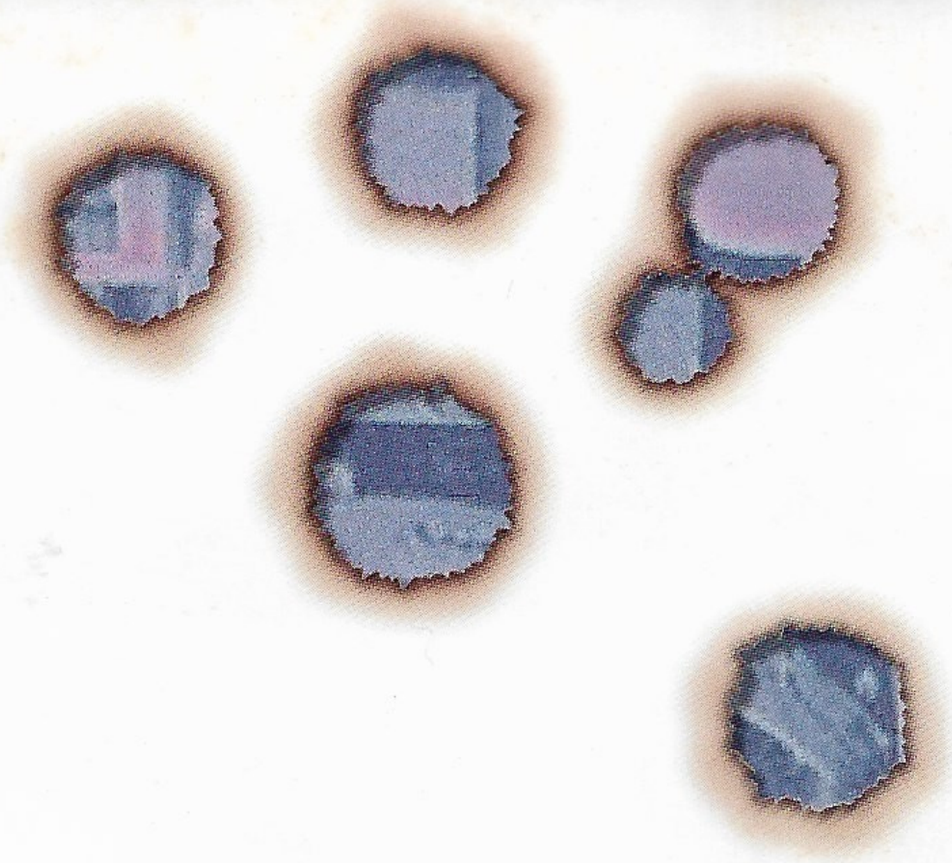

Cancel: △ BUTTON, or GunCon B.

HANDLING PRECAUTIONS

• This disc is software for the PlayStation home video-game system. Do not use it in other equipment: doing so may damage that equipment or adversely affect your hearing.
• The original release is for Japanese PlayStation systems bearing the NTSC J or FOR SALE AND USE IN JAPAN ONLY mark. It cannot be used on overseas PlayStation systems. Read this booklet and the console's instruction and safety manuals.
• Place the disc in the console with its printed label facing upwards. Gently press its centre into place so it is secure.
• When removing the disc after play, press OPEN and wait until the disc has stopped completely. Never touch a rotating disc: this may cause injury, damage the disc or damage the console.
• Keep both sides free of fingerprints, dirt and scratches. Do not attach stickers or write or draw on the disc with a pencil or pen.
• If dirty, gently wipe from the centre towards the edge with a soft cloth such as a spectacle-cleaning cloth. Do not use record cleaner or solvents.
• Never use a cracked, warped or adhesive-repaired disc: it may malfunction.
• Store away from direct sunlight, heaters, high temperatures and damp places.
• Do not put heavy objects on the case or disc or drop them: breakage or injury may result.
• After play, return the disc to its case and keep it out of the reach of small children.
• Damage caused by improper handling is not covered by compensation.
• Do not connect the PlayStation to a projection television: persistent images may burn into the screen.
• Some software requires a memory card. Consult the game's manual.

HEALTH PRECAUTIONS

• Take a break of about 15 minutes for every hour of play.
• Avoid playing when tired or short of sleep.
• Play in a well-lit room and sit as far from the television as practical.
• In rare cases, strong light or repeated flashing images may cause muscle spasms or loss of consciousness. If you have experienced such symptoms, consult a doctor before playing. If symptoms occur while playing or watching, stop immediately and seek medical attention.
